

CONNECTION & COMMUNITY INTEGRATION

Social support among veterans has been associated with better quality of life and as a protective factor of suicidal thoughts. According to the 2022 Wounded Warrior Project® (WWP) Annual Warrior Survey, four in every five warriors (78 percent) reported feeling isolated — a stark contrast to the camaraderie that many experience during their time in the military.

WWP's partner programs help to create a supportive and inclusive environment where veterans can connect with others, make a direct impact on their community, efficiently access community resources, and renew the sense of camaraderie in their lives. By augmenting WWP's own connection-based programming, our network of support helps reduce isolation, build social support, and promote community integration.
